A Message from Dave Gregory
Executive Director of the Center for Labor and Employment Law
The Dorothy Day Professor of Law

On All Souls' Day, November 2, 1987 Cesar Chavez, founder of the Farm Workers Union, talked about the evils of pesticides to a standing-room-only audience at St. John's University. Teamsters Union officials were present, yet, despite the sharp disagreements between those unions at the time, the Teamsters joined in the applause and congratulated Chavez for his inspirational remarks. Cesar told me immediately thereafter that his brief time at St. John's was one of the most gratifying and engaging days he had enjoyed in some years. On behalf of the entire St. John's community, I hope that The Theology of Work and the Dignity of Workers Conference will be gratifying and engaging for you. A half century ago, my father, an illiterate Appalachian coal miner and moonshiner working in Detroit as a butcher, took me to a parade. It was not nearly as grand as New York City's annual St. Patrick's Day parade, but it was a parade that he knew I should see. I caught a fleeting but indelible glimpse of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. and Walter Reuther, President of the United Auto Workers, arms linked, walking up Woodward Avenue in front of, what seemed to a small boy, the entire world. Little did I know it at the time, but that fleeting glimpse inspired my life's work, of which this Conference, a half century later, is a part. And, among our distinguished speakers is the current President of the UAW, Bob King, a worthy successor to the great visionary Reuther.

The Scriptures are replete with stories and parables about work. The Catholic Theology of Work is fulfilled in Jesus Christ, as Priest, Prophet, and King; in contemporary terms, these are instances of knowledge-based analytical and intellectual work. Carpentry, a valuable skilled trade, gave Jesus immediate credibility with the workers who followed Him. The Genesis story of creation grounds the Theology of Work of the world's great monotheistic religions. The Benedictine foundation of monasticism, the Catholic Worker, and Opus Dei are but three of the manifestations demonstrating how work can be an instrument of sanctification. The Dignity of Workers seems self-evident; that is, does anyone seriously argue against the Dignity of Workers? Yet, President Obama says that unions are "under assault." Wage and hour claims proliferate. Millions of workers are not paid their just wages. Structural underfunded public sector pensions threaten to bankrupt state governments, and to leave public sector workers and retirees bereft. The minimum wage is insufficient, and the living wage initiative has had a fitful contemporary history. The social contract is badly shredded in many quarters. And, what of the unemployed; and, the millions more underemployed? Immigration intersects powerfully with the Conference themes; the Catholic Bishops, including Bishop Nicholas DiMarzio, are in the forefront of the immigration debates. For those fortunate enough to work, many report that they are working beyond exhaustion, holding down two or three jobs in chronic sleep deprivation. Leisure, and time for family and friends, is more elusive than ever.

The challenges and opportunities are many. How does the Theology of Work inform the Dignity of Workers? How can we make timely the timeless Truth? In the spirit of Cesar Chavez, how can we go in peace to make peace? May your heart's desire—and the vocation that brings you to this Conference—be renewed for the important work ahead.

Some Conference Themes

Come to Me all you who labor and are burdened, and I will give you rest. Take up My yoke, and learn from Me, for I am meek and humble of heart, and you shall have your rest, for My yoke is easy and My burden light. Matthew 11:28-30

That the spirit of revolutionary change, which has long been disturbing the nations of the world, should have passed beyond the sphere of politics and made its influence felt in the cognate sphere of practical economics is not surprising. The elements of the conflict now raging are unmistakable, in the vast expansion of industrial pursuits and the marvellous discoveries of science; in the changed relations between masters and workmen; in the enormous fortunes of some few individuals, and the utter poverty of the masses; the increased self reliance and closer mutual combination of the working classes; as also, finally, in the prevailing moral degeneracy. The momentous gravity of the state of things now obtaining fills every mind with painful apprehension; wise men are discussing it; practical men are proposing schemes; popular meetings, legislatures, and rulers of nations are all busied with it--actually there is no question which has taken deeper hold on the public mind. Pope Leo XIII, Rerum Novarum 1 Encyclical on Capital and Labor (1891)

While reflecting on the theme of work, it is appropriate to recall how important it is that labour unions—which have always been encouraged and supported by the Church—should be open to the new perspectives that are emerging in the world of work.

Pope Benedict XVI, Caritas in Veritate 64 Encyclical on Integral Human Development in Charity and Truth (2009)

Jesus stumbling through the streets--On the road to Calvary-- Nailed high to testify Between two local thieves--And as they hung there dying--One asked "what lay beyond"--

"That all depends," the Master said, "Which side are you on?"

"Which Side Are You On?" Traditional anthem of the Mine Workers

As revised by Arlo Guthrie

Let's drink to the hard working people--Let's drink to the salt of the earth--Let's drink to the two thousand million--Let's think of the humble of birth—

"The Salt of the Earth," Mick Jagger and Keith Richard, The Rolling Stones, 1968

Money speaks for money, the Devil for his own--Who comes to speak for the skin and the bone?--What a comfort to the widow, a light to the child--There is power in a Union

"There Is Power In A Union," Billy Bragg, 1986

"You can figure out the entire political and economic picture by looking at one single employment relationship. Go ahead...take a look...Dreiser said the favorite drama of the American people is the story of a murder trial. Nineteen twenty-five he said it. During that big money boomtime. Notice he said the favorite drama, not the real drama. The real drama? No one want to talk about it. Work. Wages. Hours. Conditions of employment. Employment! Listen closely to what people talk about---it's what people talk about almost all the time. .
